Glencoe Limestone Deposit & Cement Plant Opportunity (Canada)

Ref. No: B031

Introduction

The Glencoe Cement Project, owned by Atlantic Industrial Minerals (AIM), is located in Cape Breton, Nova Scotia (Canada) approximately 45 km north of the town of Port Hawkesbury and tide water. The limestone deposit consists of 1 billion tonnes of carbonate rocks, about 500 million tonnes of which are -low alkali- cement grade. Strait of Canso can accommodate the largest shipping vessels in the world and is a brown field site, industrially permitted by the town of Port Hawkesbury in an effort to attract and benefit project. Deposit is accessible by road on the 105 Trans Canada Highway.

Completed Studies

2006: Detailed scoping study, commissioned by the provincial government, carried out by Consultec out of Toronto.

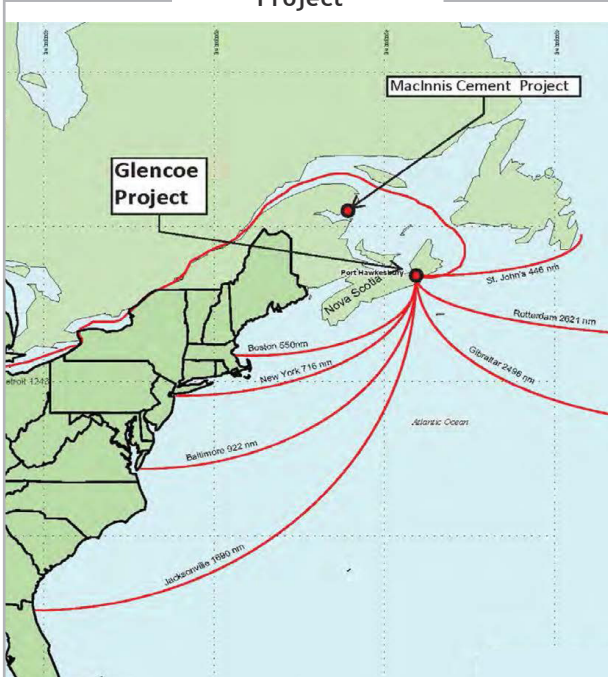

2014: Positive permitting scoping study by GHD/ Market study by PWC / Site-specific conceptual study by FLSmidth.
2015: General market study by John Kline.

Outlines

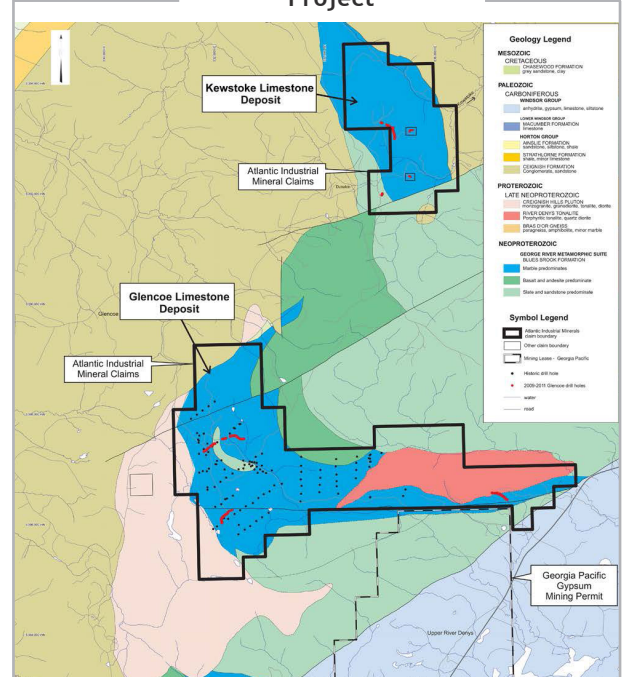

On the basis of indicated reserves alone, the Glencoe deposit could supply a cement plant with raw materials for over 250 years / There is a strong local government support for the project / Glencoe limestone deposit has a low alkali chemical composition whereas a lot of the deposits in the US are not / In close proximity shipping distance to the huge Eastern Seaboard US market / AIM is looking for joint venture partner as well as considering sales option.
